Alumni Talk Series

Learning from Experience. Leading with Inspiration.

The Alumni Talk Series is a signature experience of the School of Public Health designed to connect current students with our remarkable alumni from all around the world. The series can take place offline or online and provides a robust interactive space in which students can glean real-world knowledge, professional development, and motivation from those who have ventured down the same paths.

In each event, alumni share stories about their professional journeys, including the challenges and evolving nature of their experience, in a wide range of fields, including public health policy, research, global health, data science, epidemiology, and healthcare management. In addition to expanding the students' perspective of future careers, the alumni talk events are a platform for mentorship and networking.

Whether a live guest lecture, a virtual panel discussion, or an informal career Q&A, the Alumni Talk Series is a space for our legacy and our future to meet - supporting our students to imagine their own impact on the world of public health.
